

Canadian Officer Here As Technical Adviser For 'Big Picture' Film

A BIG PICTURE release, featuring the Royal Canadian Army, is currently being through the editing stage here with Maj Jack Donoghue, deputy director of public relations, Canadian Army Headquarters, as technical adviser.

The film, slated for release early this fall, will be telecast simultaneously over all outlets of the Canadian Broadcasting Network with a special French narration track for those areas in which French is the predominant language.

A camera crew from APC, headed by Capt Gastone Fallises, shot the location footage during May and June at London, Ontario; Ottawa, Quebec, Edmonton, Alberta; and Gatetown, New Brunswick. Maj Donoghue was with the crew as liaison officer at all of the location sites except Gatetown. Other crew members included 1st Lt Herbert H. Ballinger, cameraman; Sp-5 Clement E. James, assistant cameraman; Sgt Richard Sands and Pfc Richard Boreath, sound men.

Band Records Marches

The Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps Band recorded some 20 martial airs for the musical scoring of "Salute to Canada" and Mgt Stuart Queen, host-narrator for the BIG PICTURE series, went to Citadel Fortress at Quebec for recording of the opening and closing narration, instead of doing it here at APC as is the general rule.

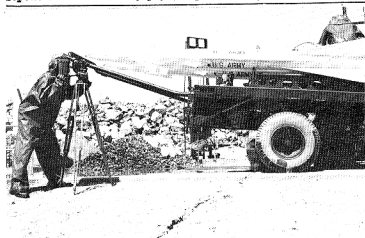

"Salute to Canada" which will be a composite of location footage, stock footage and special effects, will point up the traditions of the proud old military organization and the aspects of its mission in Dominion, Empire and UN and NATO affairs.

Also to be brought out is the fact that American and Canadian forces have fought shoulder to shoulder on many battlefronts in the past, sharing many victories. Today also, in an era of uneasy peace, the two armies engage in joint exercises, have mutually established testing facilities for new methods and equipment, jointly participated in the Tri-Partite Standardization Training with Great Britain and exchanged board and observation personnel.

Richard Allen and Ben Stelson, Information Films, Production Division, are producer and executive producer, with Mike Deniano as film editor.

'Easy Pay' Plan Is Set Up
